

The client runs the Main() that creates the PrimInterperator and initiates the Display. The strings received from the command console will be computed by the interperator method Interperate(). This method will analyze the command, and call the corresponding method of the Poster class. The response from the server will return to the PrimInterperator to be translated to a String. The String is then displayed in the console for the user.

The client runs the Main() that creates the PrimInterperator and initiates the Display. The strings received from the command console will be computed by the interperator method Interperate(). This method will analyze the command, and call the corresponding method of the Poster class. The response from the server will return to the PrimInterperator to be translated to a String. The String is then displayed in the console for the user.